Mazanec, Raskin & Ryder is proud to announce that partner Casey C. Stansbury is the newly appointed chair of the Defense Research Institute's (DRI) Governmental Liability Committee. Founded more than 50 years ago, DRI is the nation's leading organization of defense attorneys and in-house counsel.

"We could not be prouder of Casey," said Joe Nicholas, MRR President and Managing Partner. "He has been an integral part of DRI's Governmental Liability Committee for a number of years and we're sure that his term as chair will serve as a great capstone to his dedicated service to the committee as he leads it forward over the course of the next year."

Casey focuses his practice on insurance defense, civil rights and governmental liability issues. He represents insurance companies/risk pools and their insureds with respect to both first and third-party claims, including employment discrimination, professional liability, municipal liability, automobile negligence claims, general commercial matters, bad faith claims, uninsured claims, products liability, wrongful death claims, commercial premises liability claims, and property and casualty claims. He also has significant experience counseling clients in insurance coverage matters, including the securing of declaratory judgments on policy interpretations. He regularly counsels and represents police officers, correctional officials, municipalities, and public officials in a variety of matters including employment concerns, contract disputes, and civil rights actions.

The recipient of numerous professional accolades, Casey earned the Defense Research Institute's 2014 Albert H. Parnell Outstanding Program Chair Award and is also named as a Super Lawyer by Kentucky Super Lawyers magazine. He is involved in a number of professional organizations, including the Kentucky Defense Counsel, Federation of Defense and Corporate Counsel (FDCC), the Risk and Insurance Management Society, and the Bluegrass Claims Association.
